WE Culture Is Back!

The 25th edition of We Culture that took place Saturday 27, 2020 at Kulture Cafe presented the topic Black Owned Business. To get an idea how Black Owned Business is going in the United States a video was shown in which Maggie Anderson focused on Black Owned Business. In this case she referred to what that late Martin Luther King described as Economic Injustice. To clarify the mentioned Injustice she explained that in USA there is the Asian Market, The White Market , the Latino Market and the Black Market . And from the Markets mentioned the Black Market the dollar has the lowest circulation. At the other hand, Maggie Anderson informed that there are products of which the purchasing power is the highest among black consumers. But these products do not have black suppliers or are black owned. She mentioned for instants black hair products that are made by L'oreal, but nor black suppliers nor black owned business are related to this product. Kentucky Fried Chicken is another product that has a high consumers percentage under the black consumer, but no black suppliers or black owned business is not involved. After seen the video of Maggie Anderson several aspects were brought forward by those present ,regarding black owned business in Aruba. It was said that some people has ideas for doing business , but they have a kind of fare for starting the business they have in mind. To cope with that, some tips were given to deal with that. A Black Owned Business person said the business he has do not get enough support by the black consumers, but does get support by the non black consumers. All in All, a message given was that the black consumers in Aruba should give more support to black owned businesses.

This informative and educational evening ,ended with a profound exchange of ideas, suggestions and more, concerning Black Owned Business, at the Kulture Cafe.

Forgive To Live (poem by David Quant)

To live is not just to be alive,
And one can stop existing before they even die,
By carrying weights that was never even yours,
Weights that dim your light and keep your trust at the level of the floor,
See the seed of unforgiveness is the heaviest of them all,
Small and insignificant in-size, so you don't even notice when it fall,
But with years it grows,
And with years it shows,

As your heart carry resentment and your face loose its glow,

As new relationships are hindered by pains of the past,

As new opportunities are turned down because you convinced yourself that you don't deserve the chance,

Offenses and bad experiences will continue to be sown, as we are mere humans and make mistakes,

But sowing the seed of unforgiveness is a choice that you make,

So To live is to forgive, and to be able to receive forgiveness,

Forgiveness from God,

Forgiveness from yourself,

And to forgive others,

So you can live and truly be yourself
